FIRST WATER enters the Kualapuu Reservoir at Molokai, Hawaii. When filled to capacity in a few years, the reservoir will hold nearly a billion and a half gallons of water with a level of 50 feet. A nylon-reinforced butyl rubber lining is just 1/32-inch thick, but will give without tearing under tremendous water weight.

TIMELY QUOTES

Oh, well, it's not the end of the world.
—Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr. of New Orleans, arrested on obscenity charges at a stag movie show.
Some of the people back home are so anxious to make friends of our enemies that sometimes they even seem ready to make enemies of our friends.
—Vice President Agnew, while touring Asia.
I don't see how we're going to get inflation under control unless there is both a drop in profits and a little drop in employment.
—Jenkin Lloyd Jones, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Get The Light From GODS LIGHTHOUSE GUIDE YOU TO HIS CHURCH

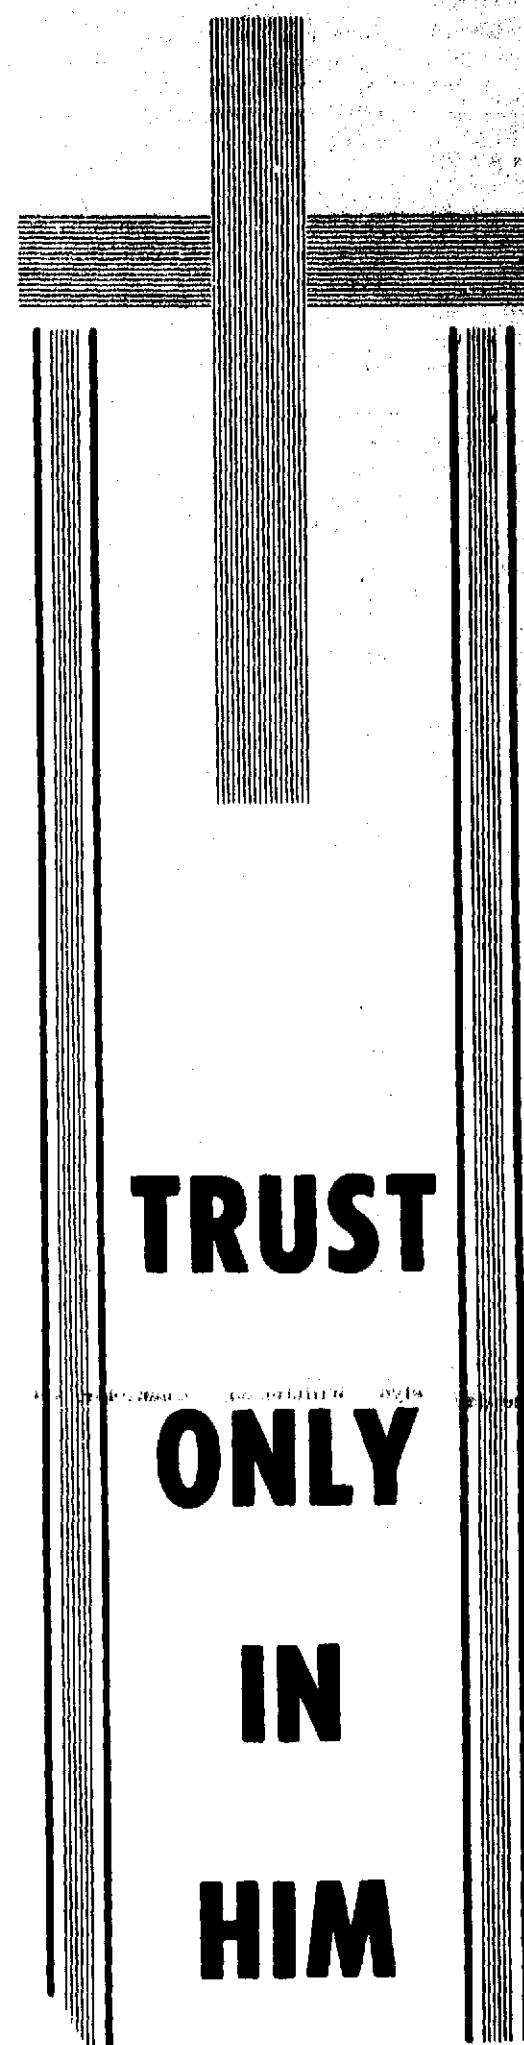

Sin's Grip

How deep in the filth are you? Does sin have you in its clutch... under its control? Have you ever stopped to determine what is sordid and what is sublime in this life? God said, "the rod of the wicked shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous." Maybe it is time, right now, to consider your plight... that you are bound by the strong hand of sin. God is always ready to cast a life-line to those who call upon Him. He will lift you out of the murky confines of sin and loose the grip which has you entangled. It's a good time to about-face, to start going to church. Why not pledge to spend each Sunday in worshiping the Lord during the rest of this year. He said to cast your burdens upon Him and He would sustain you.

You In The Church
The Church In You
— form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.

TRUST
ONLY
HIM

If your church is to be a going concern, it must have church-going members. Sponsors listed below urge you to attend services this week.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY - THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

QUICK QUIZ BLONDIE

Q—What is a crabapple?

A—It is the original, wild tree. Our native crabapples are stunted and produce small, sour apples better for jelly than for eating.

Q—What chemical is used to produce fumed oak?

A—Oak is given a weathered appearance by exposure to fumes of ammonia from uncorked cans, being first given a coat of filler.

McLain Hopes For Return To Baseball

By LARRY PATRICK
Associated Press Writer
LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — "I believe and hope to get back in baseball this year," said McLain. "Detroit pitcher Donny Nelson said today he would like to see his Tiger teammates who started playing baseball training across town Friday."

McLain hopes in front of his Lakeland home one day after baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended the 35-year-old All-Star pitcher indefinitely for what Kuhn called "involvement in 1967 bookmaking activities."

"If the ballplayers want to talk to me, I'd like to go to talk to them," McLain said. "I haven't said anything about their wanting to see me," he said.

Meanwhile, the Tigers opened up spring training at Merchants Stadium with the signing of all but one player, top Cesar Gutierrez, who is en route from Venezuela.

Detroit's second foremost pitcher, Mickey Lolich, and first baseman Norm Cash signed their contracts Friday morning.

In a taped television interview with WTVT, Tampa, Fla., McLain also said he could not go into much detail about the suspension because "I'm under supervision by Commissioner Kuhn's office."

"One of these days, I hope people will find out what this is all about," McLain added, noting he has received "a tremendous amount of telegrams giving me their support."

"I've got to look for a job, I've got a home to pay for, a family to feed," McLain said. He added he would either have to "get back into baseball" or he'll have to go on the nightclub circuit again. McLain has appeared in several clubs, performing on the organ and singing.

Further troubles beset the McLain family Friday, when a suburban Detroit judge ordered the McLains to be evicted from their home near Detroit unless they pay $2,400 in back rent within 20 days.

McLain, who had a $90,000 baseball contract this season, has had other financial problems lately.

Earlier, the two-time Cy Young award winner said in a copyrighted interview with the Detroit News that he feels he will be reinstated within a month.

McLain also said, "I'm very sorry, I caused a lot of people a lot of embarrassment—not only my wife, Starlyn, but my father-in-law, (Baseball Hall of Famer Lou Boudreau), and my mother."

McLain said he's "embarrassed baseball to a certain extent. I'm asking the benefit of the doubt. I apologize to the commissioner and I'm sorry anything like this has had to happen."

Chaps Beat Colonels

142 to 138
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The way the Dallas Chaparrals are going, they may beat out Denver and New Orleans for the Western Division title in the American Basketball Association.

The Chaps won their sixth straight game by defeating the Kentucky Colonels Friday night 142-138. That put them only one-half game behind first place Denver and a mere two percentage points behind second place New Orleans. Denver has a 32-25 record, New Orleans 30-24 and the Chaps 31-25.

Carolina beat the Indiana Pacers 101-96 and Washington downed the Los Angeles Stars 123-111 in the other two ABA games scheduled.

In the National Basketball Association Los Angeles beat Milwaukee 119-114, Detroit whipped Baltimore 122-119, Chicago humbled Philadelphia 126-119, Phoenix whacked San Diego 126-117 and Boston shaded Seattle 127-125.

Louie Dampier threw in 44 points for the Colonels against Dallas, but the Chaps got a combined 80 points from Glen Combs, John Beasley and Ron Boone. Combs scored 31, Beasley 28 and Boone 21.

Kentucky led by one point at 104-103 at the end of third quarter before the Chaps put on an 11-0 burst to go ahead for good in the game at Fort Worth, Tex.

The Chaps now have won nine of 13 games since Max Williams took over the coaching chores on Jan. 14. They haven't lost since the New York Nets beat them 113-108 on Jan. 31.

Bob Verga's 30 points paced Carolina over the first place Pacers in the Eastern Division at Greensboro, N.C. Indiana cut a 10-point deficit to 94-90 in the last period, but couldn't get closer. Fred Lewis, with 24 points, led the Pacers.

The score was tied 19 times and the lead changed hands 30 times in the Washington at Los Angeles game before a tip-in by Ira Harge with 1:37 left put the Caps in front for good.

Rick Barry led Washington with 26 points, 10 coming in the last four minutes. Craig Raymond was high for the Stars with 25.

Lakers Win Over Bucks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Jerry West and Mel Counts have brought the Los Angeles Lakers home with a bounce too high for Lew Alcindor to handle.

West banged in 37 points and Counts added 22 as the Lakers marked their return to Los Angeles after a four-game road trip by coming from behind to beat Alcindor and the Milwaukee Bucks 119-114 Friday night.

The victory brought the Lakers within two games of first place Atlanta in the National Basketball Association's Western Division race.

In other games, Detroit edged Baltimore 122-119; Chicago topped Philadelphia 126-119; Phoenix downed San Diego 126-117 and Boston rallied to shade Seattle 127-125.

In the American Basketball Association, Dallas defeated Kentucky 142-138; Carolina trimmed Indiana 101-96 and Washington beat Los Angeles 123-111.

Trailing 64-54 at halftime, the injury-plagued Lakers outscored Milwaukee 21-5 in the first seven minutes of the second half and went on to snap the visitors' winning streak at four games.

Alcindor led the Bucks with 31 points.

Backcourt partners Jimmy Walker, with 31 points, and Dave Bing, with 27, led the Pistons past Baltimore. The Bulls finished the game under protest after Detroit's Howard Komives swapped punches with Jack Marlin of Baltimore early in the final quarter—and was awarded two free throws following the scuffle.

Bob Love hit 10 of 14 shots from the floor in the second half as Chicago subdued the 76ers. Limited to six points in the first half, he finished with 29, including the Bulls' first eight in the final quarter. Chet Walker was high for the winners with 32 and Billy Cunningham had 26 for Philadelphia.

Down by 12 points after three quarters Boston came from behind to beat the SuperSonics at Seattle.

Learning Is Now Leroy's Game

By ROGER DOUGHTY
NEA Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO—(NEA)—Flying high over Texas one day, running low on fuel, Air Force jet pilot LeRoy Bolden, former All-American halfback at Michigan State and star of the 1953 Rose Bowl, peeked through the clouds and found himself looking at a whole lot of city, right where he had expected to find a whole lot of runway. So, he reversed direction.

"My goof," LeRoy conceded the other day, bounding up a flight of stairs in San Francisco's Raphael Well Elementary School. "I ran out of fuel just as I reached the base, but I got the plane down O.K. I just got fouled up and went the wrong way."

Today, it's a rare thing to find LeRoy going in the wrong direction, although he still spends plenty of time at 30,000 feet. In his role as an educational psychologist and director of Project Learn Well for the Behavioral Research Laboratory of Palo Alto, Calif., he usually leaves the driving to the guys up front as he commutes from his California home to Texas, New York, Washington and a lot of other places.

"LeRoy," says a man who knows him well, "is something of a militant. What he's militant about are the deplorable educational standards so many disadvantaged kids—black and white—have shoved down their throats."

At 5-7½ and 163 pounds, Bolden was just a bit disadvantaged, at least where size was concerned, when he said goodbye to Flint, Michigan's Northern High School in the early '50s, but he became one of the most outstanding running backs in Big 10 history.

That's ancient history now and LeRoy prefers not to live in the past.

"I was lucky," he tells you, slipping quietly into a classroom to observe a teacher and a paraprofessional—a neighborhood mother—guide a class of third graders along the road to better reading. "So many of these kids are caught in a cycle. They never get anywhere, despite ability. What I'm trying to do is reduce one link in the chain of failure probability for these kids and that is family disinterest."

It's Bolden's theory that too many administrations seal their schools off from parents. The end result, he feels, is apathy on the part of the parents and failure for the children.

"A teacher can knock himself out working with a kid all day," he reasons, "and all of that work can be destroyed in 10 minutes at home by apathetic parents."

Accordingly, Bolden has saved a big chunk of the action for the parents whose children are involved in Project Learn Well.

The project itself is a complete revamping of a school from top to bottom, based on individual instruction, with each child working at his own pace," he explains. "The kids have home rooms, but they move around the building, going from room to room for different classes."

The teachers specialize in one subject—reading or math or social studies—so they're not expected to know everything there is to know about 10 different things then try to teach it to 30 different kids. That's the way it does in most schools and it's done 300 areas of accountability on the teacher. And there's an ample supply of psychologically sophisticated material on hand.

Where the parents come in is by literally coming in.

Unlike many schools, where token PTA's fail to go out and get parents involved, Bolden's people seek to make the schools the focal point of all activity in the community.

Thirty-six community representatives work at Raphael Well, for example, aiding teachers in the paraprofessional program. A community teacher visits parents at home if they can't come in, and a parent-teacher organization has been so much muscle during the past few years that it is now

Raging, Restless Rupp Keeps Claws Sharp

By LEE MUELLER
NEA Staff Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(NEA)—Fifty years ago, Dr. James Naismith and Adolph P. Rupp were sitting around Robinson's Gymnasium in Lawrence, Kan., discussing a new game.

Dr. Naismith was a dapper, mustachioed little man who had invented a game he called basketball 30 years earlier for the purpose of keeping football players in condition during the off-season.

Rupp was a young student at Kansas University, just off a farm near Halstead where he began playing a modified game of basketball at age 8 with a wadded-up gunnysack. It was modified, Rupp said, because, hell, you couldn't dribble a gunnysack.

Dr. Naismith's new game consisted of a rope and several men and resembled, says Rupp, a tug-of-war. The conversation, while clouded somewhat by history, ended something like this:

Dr. Naismith: "Mr. Rupp, my new game might even be better than basketball."

Rupp: "I doubt it."

Fifty years later, it appears Rupp was right. Dr. Naismith's new game is no more. Basketball, on the other hand, flourishes. It perhaps is no coincidence, either, that modern-day basketball is nearly as synonymous with Adolph Rupp as it is with Dr. Naismith.

In 40 years at the University of Kentucky, Rupp has become the all-time leader in coaching wins with more than 830. His teams have won four NCAA titles and 24 Southeastern Conference championships.

This season, Rupp is 68—two years, they say, away from retirement. While his Wildcats remain unbeaten, as the nation's No. 1 team, he sits at home games with his right foot propped up on a blue cushion, which is not the easy life it might seem.

Rupp has an advanced case of diabetes and his foot is infected. He has lost 16 pounds. He has high blood pressure. Upset recently because his car would not start, he felt chest pains and had to be taken home by police.

Because doctors warned him one leg might have to be amputated unless he rested, Rupp now leaves home only to attend daily practices and games. The man is older, less strong, but the image—and spirit—remain.

At practice, he sits in his leather-covered chair, barely awake, lulled by the bouncing of basketballs in an empty gymnasium.

"The legislature should pass a law," he told Louisville columnist Dave Kindred, "that if a coach is over 65 years old the team manager, every day right before practice, should bring the coach two ounces of bourbon with a chaser."

I get so sleepy listening to those balls bouncing."

At games, however, Rupp is still raging and restless and sometimes forgets his

Willis Reed, The Quiet Man

By MARTY KALBOVSKY

NEW YORK—(NEA)—To be a sports hero in this city requires, as Joe Namath would say, flaunting whatever it is one possesses, from Babe Ruth's waddle to Tom Seaver's effervescence.

But consider now the case of Willis Reed. How does one go about flaunting a penchant for solitude? As New York sports heroes go, Willis Reed, captain of the Knicks' E-rokers, is something of an enigma. About the only thing he and Joe Willie Namath have in common are expensive overcoats.

"I don't go the social route at all," Willis Reed was saying one night after a Knicks game in which he was, as usual, the dominant figure. "I prefer being alone. I was never much for mingling with people and making appearances and all that. When I leave the Garden after a game, I go straight home and divorce myself from the outside world."

Willis Reed lives alone in a three-room apartment, not on Manhattan's East Side or in Greenwich Village, but in Rego Park, Queens, where the lone flurries of activity occur during rush hours at subway stops. His floors are not laden with anything as extravagant as llama skin and, except for the four-foot silver trophy he received for being the Most Valuable Player in the NBA All-Star Game, his surroundings are not reminiscent of basketball achievement.

"Willis is a helluva guy," says Danny Whelan, the Knicks' trainer. "He doesn't say too much around here but when he does, people take notes. He's a leader by example, not the kind who rah-rahs his teammates to death. The rest of the guys on this team love Willis because he's honest. He's the captain and he doesn't try to con anybody. If he has something to say, he just says it. There's no nonsense from Willis."

The Old Man's Game

NEW YORK—(NEA)—On the court Pancho Gonzales appears tough, dedicated, lean, mean, not soft and sweetly sagacious as one could rightfully expect of a grandfather. Of a tennis star who has spanned two decades, of a man nearly 42.

Recently he upset Rod Laver, 10 years younger and rated the best player in the world now, and did it dramatically by coming back after being behind two sets to one and winning in five and winning also $10,000 for this match at Madison Square Garden.

He won it typically, as he has done through the years, with matchless skill, tenacity and with a raging temperament that he uses like combustion for his engine rather than to burn himself like a fire out of control.

Gonzales, after a close call against him, pounded his racket on the floor, and another time stretched his arms out and stood straight as if being crucified. Later, he complained about the lights, the nervous lump in his stomach, the footing, and about the photographers, who, once, he looked at before serving and hissed, "You damn cultures."

His game was very, very good and he moved gracefully but doggedly and precisely. And, near the end especially, the crowd of almost 15,000 was so awestruck and respectful of the aging pro that no sound was heard save for his deep grunt as he served.

His hair, which is gray-brown except for a streak of light gray in the front wave, is long and it leaps in a heap and then drops again as the sweat flies off in full run.

His long frame and those long, knock-kneed, legs get him where he wants to go, still. He is brown from the California sun, where he lives, but under the Garden lights his face, thicker than gum, looks sallow yellow.

"Yes," said a young, tasteful lady named Nancy Pratt, "he is very attractive. The way he plays, and that mane."

The mane, you mean sort of leonine?" she was asked.

"No, more like a stallion."

She was asked, then, about Gonzales' court manners. Aren't those tantrums immature?

"But I like that, too," she said.

"That's appealing."

"That's passion."

In the locker room afterwards all the fervor of the Latin Laver prototype diminished. His smile, with teeth not all that pearly, alas, was warm. And his answers to questions were disarmingly frank and low-keyed.

Alan King, the comedian, came in, congratulated Gonzales and said, "Pancho, one of your greatest fans in the world is outside and she'd love to meet you. Ethel Kennedy."

"Of course, of course. Just let me put on my shoes."

"Oh, congratulations," said Mrs. Kennedy in the corridor, wearing blue coat, blue dress, blue nylon, blue shoes and bright, brownish eyes. "You were so wonderful."

Gonzales thanked her and answered her questions about aspects of the match and whether the lights did indeed bother him.

Well, she said, they surely didn't bother you on those verbal smashes. You gave us a great evening."

I'm glad you enjoyed it," he replied.

Back in the locker room, his tennis shoes off again, Gonzales was saying, "I played with Bob once. Must've been in 1963. He had his own tennis court at his home in Virginia. We played doubles with two fellows from his place. We played very early, about seven in the morning. He had such a tight schedule

NEW YORK—(NEA)—To be a sports hero in this city requires, as Joe Namath would say, flaunting whatever it is one possesses, from Babe Ruth's waddle to Tom Seaver's effervescence.

But consider now the case of Willis Reed. How does one go about flaunting a penchant for solitude? As New York sports heroes go, Willis Reed, captain of the Knicks' E-rokers, is something of an enigma. About the only thing he and Joe Willie Namath have in common are expensive overcoats.

"I don't go the social route at all," Willis Reed was saying one night after a Knicks game in which he was, as usual, the dominant figure. "I prefer being alone. I was never much for mingling with people and making appearances and all that. When I leave the Garden after a game, I go straight home and divorce myself from the outside world."

Willis Reed lives alone in a three-room apartment, not on Manhattan's East Side or in Greenwich Village, but in Rego Park, Queens, where the lone flurries of activity occur during rush hours at subway stops. His floors are not laden with anything as extravagant as llama skin and, except for the four-foot silver trophy he received for being the Most Valuable Player in the NBA All-Star Game, his surroundings are not reminiscent of basketball achievement.

"Willis is a helluva guy," says Danny Whelan, the Knicks' trainer. "He doesn't say too much around here but when he does, people take notes. He's a leader by example, not the kind who rah-rahs his teammates to death. The rest of the guys on this team love Willis because he's honest. He's the captain and he doesn't try to con anybody. If he has something to say, he just says it. There's no nonsense from Willis."

The Old Man's Game

NEW YORK—(NEA)—On the court Pancho Gonzales appears tough, dedicated, lean, mean, not soft and sweetly sagacious as one could rightfully expect of a grandfather. Of a tennis star who has spanned two decades, of a man nearly 42.

Recently he upset Rod Laver, 10 years younger and rated the best player in the world now, and did it dramatically by coming back after being behind two sets to one and winning in five and winning also $10,000 for this match at Madison Square Garden.

He won it typically, as he has done through the years, with matchless skill, tenacity and with a raging temperament that he uses like combustion for his engine rather than to burn himself like a fire out of control.

Gonzales, after a close call against him, pounded his racket on the floor, and another time stretched his arms out and stood straight as if being crucified. Later, he complained about the lights, the nervous lump in his stomach, the footing, and about the photographers, who, once, he looked at before serving and hissed, "You damn cultures."

His game was very, very good and he moved gracefully but doggedly and precisely. And, near the end especially, the crowd of almost 15,000 was so awestruck and respectful of the aging pro that no sound was heard save for his deep grunt as he served.

His hair, which is gray-brown except for a streak of light gray in the front wave, is long and it leaps in a heap and then drops again as the sweat flies off in full run.

His long frame and those long, knock-kneed, legs get him where he wants to go, still. He is brown from the California sun, where he lives, but under the Garden lights his face, thicker than gum, looks sallow yellow.

"Yes," said a young, tasteful lady named Nancy Pratt, "he is very attractive. The way he plays, and that mane."

The mane, you mean sort of leonine?" she was asked.

"No, more like a stallion."

She was asked, then, about Gonzales' court manners. Aren't those tantrums immature?

"But I like that, too," she said.

"That's appealing."

"That's passion."

In the locker room afterwards all the fervor of the Latin Laver prototype diminished. His smile, with teeth not all that pearly, alas, was warm. And his answers to questions were disarmingly frank and low-keyed.

Alan King, the comedian, came in, congratulated Gonzales and said, "Pancho, one of your greatest fans in the world is outside and she'd love to meet you. Ethel Kennedy."

"Of course, of course. Just let me put on my shoes."

"Oh, congratulations," said Mrs. Kennedy in the corridor, wearing blue coat, blue dress, blue nylon, blue shoes and bright, brownish eyes. "You were so wonderful."

Gonzales thanked her and answered her questions about aspects of the match and whether the lights did indeed bother him.

Well, she said, they surely didn't bother you on those verbal smashes. You gave us a great evening."

I'm glad you enjoyed it," he replied.

Back in the locker room, his tennis shoes off again, Gonzales was saying, "I played with Bob once. Must've been in 1963. He had his own tennis court at his home in Virginia. We played doubles with two fellows from his place. We played very early, about seven in the morning. He had such a tight schedule

Higher Postage Weighed Again

No sooner does the Post Office Department emerge from the annual outpouring of Christmas mail than it leaks—or somebody does—a story of increased postage. The source of this latest idea remains a bit vague; the "Nixon administration" is "mulling" it according to The Wall Street Journal. Unnamed postal planners and others are mentioned.

This time the main change would affect first-class mail and give patrons a choice between fast and slower, or regular, service. The not-very-amusing joker in this new deal would be an increase in rates for all first-class mail. The slower service would cost 7 cents, the faster would be 10 cents as for today's airmail.

One gets the idea that the administration is not taking credit for the proposal, presumably because the plan would face hard sledding in Congress. The Journal attributes to an insider, "Nixon men like the term 'priority mail'" for the new first class, but want to avoid it because of confusion with a plan proposed by the Johnson administration.

In the President's favor is the fact that he recognized postal troubles when he came into office. Turning the mail handling over to a private corporation may not be the best solution. However, the basic problem calls for basic experiments. The raises in postage rates, fast though they come, never catch up with the department's deficits, and don't improve the services fast enough. —New Orleans (La.) Times-Picayune

Buckle Up For Savings

In many cities, fixing traffic tickets is as common as coughs caused by automotive exhausts. According to our records, however, Cleveland, Ohio, has become the first city to make fixing tickets official municipal policy.

It's not who you know or who your brother-in-law is. What determines whether your ticket can be fixed is your seat belt. If one is fastened around your waist, then you are entitled to a five dollar reduction in your traffic fine. The goal of this policy is to encourage motorists to wear seat belts and thus reduce their chances of serious injury. Traffic Judge Lloyd O. Brown, who instituted the new rule, explains it this way: "If a person takes time to wear a seat belt, it shows that he intends to drive safely. He should therefore be given consideration."

It will be interesting to see just how many of the drivers given traffic tickets in Cleveland will be wearing seat belts. If the plan makes more people safety conscious, then it would be worth trying elsewhere. —Macdon (Ga.) News

PSC Opposes Telephone Rate Changes

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The state Public Service Commission has voiced opposition to possible rate changes by telephone companies.

The PSC said Thursday that there were "ominous" signs that telephone companies were preparing to ask for intrastate rate increases if rates for long-distance calls between states were reduced.

"The Bell Co. and the independents are lurking in the wings with rate cases partially prepared, needing only the final straw of a further reduction in their revenues from interstate calling to formally launch their demands for increases in their local exchange or intrastate toll rates or both," the PSC said.

The PSC said that proposed reductions in charges for interstate long-distance calls eventually would hurt the telephone users who were least able to pay—those persons who must limit their telephone use to intrastate calls—and benefit the more affluent telephone users.

The PSC said that it supported legislation pending in Congress which would give state regulatory agencies a voice in determining the allowable interstate telephone revenues.

POLLUTION CONTROL is its bag. Eight hundred 13-foot-long Orion "vacuum cleaner" bags in this 47-foot-high structure are helping keep the air clean in Albion, Mich. Electric motors shake bags periodically and deposits are dropped into hoppers for disposal.

Prison Board Studies Order of Judge

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The state Board of Correction will meet Saturday morning at Tucker Prison Farm to discuss plans to comply with federal court orders to improve the prisons.

Correction Commissioner C. Robert Sarver said prison officials would draft an "absolutely realistic, barebones proposal."

Sarver, Board Chairman John Haley of Little Rock and Marion Burton and O. H. Storey III of Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's staff conferred Thursday about federal District Judge J. Smith Hentley's ruling Wednesday declaring the prison system unconstitutional.

Hentley has given the state until April 1 to submit a plan to bring the prisons into "constitutional tolerability." He has set a tentative date of August 1971 for the completion of prison reforms.

The special session of the legislature that will meet next month probably will be asked to begin providing the funds that will be required to make the transition in the prisons.

Prison officials had asked for almost $2 million from the special session before Hentley's ruling but Burton said more than that would be required to begin carrying out the changes Hentley ordered.

State Sen. Guy H. "Mutt" Jones of Conway said Thursday he believed the attorney general's office would appeal Hentley's ruling.

Jones told a news conference Thursday that an appeal would stay the court's orders for making changes in the prisons. For that reason, Jones said he did not believe the prison situation was an emergency that needed the special session's immediate attention.

Atty. Gen. Joe Purcell said he cannot say at this time whether he might appeal the ruling. Purcell said he had not said it. He said he wanted to talk with staff attorneys who handled the state's case before commenting.

Warns Labor Going After Higher Wages

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Labor leaders have served notice that unions will be out for big wage increases this year to try to put workers abreast of inflation.

"The average nonsupervisory employee has had no advance in the buying power of his weekly after-tax earnings in four years," the AFL-CIO Executive Council said Thursday.

"It seems there's no catching up," said the 13.6 million member labor federation's president, George Meany, asserting that workers and their unions have no choice but to demand substantial pay hikes.

Rising living costs last year wiped out 6.1 per cent of the value of the dollar, more than erasing pay gains of some 45 million rank-and-file workers who average $117.25 per week, the labor council said.

Prices in January continued at a slightly lower annual rate, the government reported. Meany said inflation is due to excess profits and that the average worker should not be asked to accept less pay.

"I don't think you should ask him to make a further sacrifice," Meany said, suggesting that stockholders help fight inflation by taking a little less profit.

Some five million workers are involved in major labor-management bargaining this year, including trucking, railroad, and other key industries.

Asked whether big wage hikes were inflationary, Meany said, "No, I think the shoe is on the other foot. If said profits have risen much faster than wages in recent years."

Reaction to Massacres Are About Same

WASHINGTON (AP) — A public opinion survey on the alleged massacre of Vietnamese civilians by U.S. troops at My Lai showed most Americans want to detach themselves from it emotionally by denying the incident happened, placing the blame on others or saying the killings were justified.

The preliminary report of the survey by the Wright Institute of Berkeley, Calif., was prepared for the two-day Congressional Conference on War and National Responsibility, opening today.

The report said the reactions of Americans were not unlike those of Germans after World War II.

Germans interviewed during a denazification campaign stood at a fair distance from Nazi atrocities, feeling uninvolved, or denying the facts or projecting the guilt on others, the study said.

"The same impetus to an emotional cop-out that produces complacent members of a Silent Majority is surprisingly strong in almost all of us, young as well as old, liberal as well as conservative," interviewer as well as interviewee, said Edward M. Opton Jr. and Robert Duckles of the Institute in a paper prepared for the conference.

The institute said the report was prepared on the basis of first-round contacts with 123 persons, 46 of whom were interviewed in depth, while 11 were given shorter questioning.

The remaining persons contacted did not participate for various reasons, including a number who "deped with the alleged massacre by hanging up their telephones as soon as the massacre was mentioned," the survey said.

Partial or complete denial that the massacre occurred was common among those interviewed, the survey said. It quoted a 66-year-old grandmother in describing the reaction of her foster daughter, "She doesn't want to believe it. She knows in her heart but refuses to face facts."

Rioters Are Fined And Sentenced

By F. RICHARD CICCONE

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The five men convicted in the riot trial were given nearly two hours to speak in the courtroom before Judge Julius J. Hoffman sentenced each to five years in prison and a fine of $5,000.

The 74-year-old judge passed sentence Friday in U.S. District Court on the five men convicted of crossing state lines with the intent of inciting rioting during the week of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

He allowed the defendants nearly two hours to speak on their behalf, then announced the sentences and fines and ruled that the convicted men must pay the costs of prosecuting their five-month trial.

The judge also ruled that the prison terms would run concurrently with the contempt sentences he imposed last weekend on the defendants and their two lawyers.

The prison terms were the maximum allowable under the federal antiriot law, but the judge could have fined each man $10,000.

Thomas A. Foran, U.S. district attorney and chief prosecutor, estimated the cost of prosecuting the case at more than $50,000. He said cost of the transcript would exceed $35,000 and fees for the 77 government witnesses would approximate $20,000.

Jury fees and the cost of housing the jurors, who were sequestered after the trial's first week, could reach $150,000, but the judge's ruling did not indicate the defendants would be liable for those charges.

In sentencing David T. Dellinger, 34; Jerry C. Rubin, 31; Abbie Hoffman, 31; Thomas E. Hayden, 30, and Rennard C. "Rennie" Davis, 29, the judge did not mention jury fees.

Judge Hoffman ruled that the defendants cannot be released from prison until the court costs and fines are paid, but the five men could avoid the payments by declaring themselves paupers.

Two codefendants, John R. Froines, 31, and Lee Weiner, 31, were acquitted by the jury of 10 women and 2 men.

In the courtroom statements, Dellinger told the judge, "I think you are a man who has had too much power over too many people for too long."

You are like George III of England (king during the American Revolution.) You are trying to hold back the tide of history."

Davis said, "I hope that I will be allowed out by 1976, and when I do come out I'm going to move right next door to Tom Foran. I'm going to organize his kids into the revolution."

Hayden told the judge that his conviction would not halt the dissent of young people in America. "They're doing things now in the streets that we never did in Chicago during the convention week. One year later, the very thing they (the government) thought they could prevent by prosecuting us in happening, an interstate riot."

Lawyer Belli Turns Down Freedoms Case

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — Lawyer Melvin Belli has turned down a request by Freedom Inc. to represent that organization in lawsuits against the U.S. Supreme Court, Department of Health Education and Welfare, and several federal judges.

Dr. Mitchell Young of Texarkana, national president of Freedom Inc., had written Belli last week requesting Belli's law firm to represent the organization.

Belli wrote in a letter that was received Thursday by Freedom Inc. officials that he and his partners had discussed the matter and it felt "we cannot help you."

Freedom Inc. plans lawsuits concerning federal intervention in the desegregation of public schools.

Historical Trip Into Background of Girl Scouting in This City

By MARY ANITA LASETER

Star Feature Writer

Next week is Girl Scout Week, March 8-15, so let's take a backward peek at early Girl Scouting in Hope. Our historical trip begins on Sunday, April 2, 1939, at 3 p.m.

That was when Mrs. Robert Campbell (now of Birmingham, Ala.), Commissioner, presided over the formal dedication of the Girl Scout Hut. Mrs. R.E. Jackson, Lt. of Troop 1, offered blessings on the Little House, and Mayor Albert Graves gave a scout history and made a presentation of the key to the Little House.

Carolyn Trimble (Mrs. Idus Murphy of Athens, O.), the first First Class Girl Scout of Hope, made the acceptance of the key. On the programs distributed that day recognition was given to Mayor Albert Graves, W.P.A., Administrator Fletcher (the construction was done by W.P.A. workers), Roy Anderson, Chairman of the Park Commission, Mont Allen, foreman, and Will Garner, caretaker. The latter two are deceased.

Work had begun on the cabin February 17, 1938, and the building was sponsored by the Girl Scout Council with Mrs. Robert Campbell, chairman, and Mrs. Ched Hall, chairman of the building committee. Mrs. Hall is now a house mother at Arkansas College in Batesville.

Four troops in Hope had a total membership of 85. In February 1938 The Star carried a story which stated this information about them. "Troop 3, 7th and 8th grade girls, was organized 3 years ago, and Mrs. Bert Webb (Tabernacle minister's wife now of Springfield, Mo.) has been the leader the past year. Troop 1, 6th and 7th grade girls, was organized last April with Mrs. Clyde Monte (deceased) as leader. Troop 2, 8th and 10th grade girls, was organized last May by Mrs. J. R. Williams (now of Sheridan) with Miss Mildred McCance (now Mrs. B. E. McMahon of North Little Rock) as leader. The Baby Troop 4, 4th and 5th graders, was organized in October with Mrs. Lyman Armstrong (now of Madison, Ind.) and Mrs. H.E. Benson as leaders."

There were two patrols in Troop 3, the Tulips and the Buttercups. With Mrs. Bert Webb as captain, the roll included: Martha Ann Alexander (now of Miami, Fla.), Patsy Ann Campbell (Mrs. Bruce Dunbar, Birmingham, Ala.), Linda Cobb (Mrs. Edgar Hartsfield, who recently moved back to Hope from Alaska), Nancy Jo Coleman (Mrs. George Warren, Ft. Worth, Tex.), Marilyn Irwin (Mrs. Harold Walker, Wichita Falls, Tex.), Rosalyn Hall (Mrs. John L. Steward, Denver), Ophelia "Tink" Hamilton (Mrs. H.J. "Bill" Fleming, Columbus, O.), Frances Harrell (Mrs. D.B. Russell, Dallas), Rose Marie Hendrix (Mrs. Rose Marie Shirey, Hope), Mary Ross McCaddin (Mrs. Cotton Thomas, Little Rock), Mary Jo Monroe (Mrs. Victor Crane, Kansas City), Dorothy Lee Nesbitt (Mrs. Jerry Connors, Blue Island, Ill.), Carolyn Trimble (already identified), and Emma Pearl Slade, Christine Springs, and Catherine Sterling (whose married names and present homes are unknown.)

In an account of a Girl Scout anniversary observance in Hope in 1938 it was learned that Dorothy Lane Henry (Mrs. Roger Dew, Little Rock), Mary Lou Morgan (Mrs. Ed Tuller, Russellville), Mary Elizabeth King (Mrs. Brack Schenck, Hope), and

Glady's Wisener (Mrs. James A. Sorrels, Glenwood) had passed from tenderfoot to second class scouts. On the program Betty Ruth Coleman (who is married and lives in Ft. Worth) and Alice Lorraine Heard (Mrs. J.G. Williams, Bartlesville, Okla.), gave a reading. Frances Thomas (Mrs. W.J. Pike, Anchorage, Alaska) and Doris Shields (Mrs. W.F. Faust, Shreveport) showed how to tie a knot.

When ground was broken for the Little House, the 12 patrol leaders each gave part of the Girl Scout law and promise. That promise is still made today by Girl Scouts everywhere. It is "On my honor I will try to do my duty to God and my country, to help other people at all times, and to obey the Girl Scout laws."

Although this is due in part to a realization Nixon won't be doing much political speaking until fall, the Republican official said it nonetheless represents a genuine desire to have Agnew address fundraising dinners.

Agnew's speaking invitations were running about 25 a day until last October when he denounced antiwar protesters as "impudent snobs who characterize themselves as intellectuals."

"That started the ball rolling," one aide said, "and after Deb Molnes it poured on in," referring to Agnew's criticism of the news media, particularly network television.

In sharp contrast, the Democrats have none who can even come close to the vice president as a fundraiser. A Democratic dinner in Miami Beach, Fla., featuring former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie was a financial flop.

The only Democrat with real fund-raising credentials, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, has been off the circuit since the automobile crash on Cape Cod last July in which a female passenger was killed.

Five Agnew appearances, three last week and two this weekend, are expected to gross some $1.5 million, with 8,000 expected to pay $100 for a dinner at St. Paul, Minn., Auditorium tonight, and nearly 1,000 due to pay that amount in Atlanta Saturday.

In Nebraska, where more than 2,500 persons bought $50 tickets to a Feb. 9 fundraising dinner at Lincoln, dinner chairman E. J. Faulkner called Agnew as a fundraiser "perfectly splendid. Next to President Nixon, he is the biggest draw in public life today."

In Missouri, where some 2,800 persons attended a Feb. 10 dinner that raised at least $180,000, state GOP Chairman Elmer E. Smith said "Agnew is riding a crest based on Nixon's performance."

"You're seeing a breakup of the old Democratic coalition—the Northern liberal, the South and labor," Smith said. "Agnew is attracting the attention of these people. And it's all based on Nixon's performance."

Two nights after his St. Louis appearance, Agnew spoke in Chicago at a dinner state Chairman Victor L. Smith said raised some $200,000, more than any past dinner except one addressed by late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Smith said Agnew has "natural appeal to the people" and has "a wonderful family life, is a good moral man and has proved himself to be a real patriot—put all these things together and add to that his candid quality, which doesn't leave any credibility gap anywhere, and you have his appeal."

All four congressmen voted for a proposal to clear the way for a record vote on three anti-civil rights amendments to the bill.

Glady's Wisener (Mrs. James A. Sorrels, Glenwood) had passed from tenderfoot to second class scouts. On the program Betty Ruth Coleman (who is married and lives in Ft. Worth) and Alice Lorraine Heard (Mrs. J.G. Williams, Bartlesville, Okla.), gave a reading. Frances Thomas (Mrs. W.J. Pike, Anchorage, Alaska) and Doris Shields (Mrs. W.F. In Nebraska, where more than 2,500 persons bought $50 tickets to a Feb. 9 fundraising dinner at Lincoln, dinner chairman E. J. Faulkner called Agnew as a fundraiser "perfectly splendid. Next to President Nixon, he is the biggest draw in public life today."

In Missouri, where some 2,800 persons attended a Feb. 10 dinner that raised at least $180,000, state GOP Chairman Elmer E. Smith said "Agnew is riding a crest based on Nixon's performance."

"You're seeing a breakup of the old Democratic coalition—the Northern liberal, the South and labor," Smith said. "Agnew is attracting the attention of these people. And it's all based on Nixon's performance."

Two nights after his St. Louis appearance, Agnew spoke in Chicago at a dinner state Chairman Victor L. Smith said raised some $200,000, more than any past dinner except one addressed by late President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Smith said Agnew has "natural appeal to the people" and has "a wonderful family life, is a good moral man and has proved himself to be a real patriot—put all these things together and add to that his candid quality, which doesn't leave any credibility gap anywhere, and you have his appeal."

All four congressmen voted for a proposal to clear the way for a record vote on three anti-civil rights amendments to the bill.

Glady's Wisener (Mrs. James A. Sorrels, Glenwood) had passed from tenderfoot to second class scouts. On the program Betty Ruth Coleman (who is married and lives in Ft. Worth) and Alice Lorraine Heard (Mrs. J.G. Williams, Bartlesville, Okla.), gave a reading. Frances Thomas (Mrs. W.J. Pike, Anchorage, Alaska) and Doris Shields (Mrs. W.F. Faust, Shreveport) showed how to tie a knot.

When ground was broken for the Little House, the 12 patrol leaders each gave part of the Girl Scout law and promise. That promise is still made today by Girl Scouts everywhere. It is "On my honor I will try to do my duty to God and my country, to help other people at all times, and to obey the Girl Scout laws."

Although this is due in part to a realization Nixon won't be doing much political speaking until fall, the Republican official said it nonetheless represents a genuine desire to have Agnew address fundraising dinners.

Agnew's speaking invitations were running about 25 a day until last October when he denounced antiwar protesters as "impudent snobs who characterize themselves as intellectuals."

"That started the ball rolling," one aide said, "and after Deb Molnes it poured on in," referring to Agnew's criticism of the news media, particularly network television.

In sharp contrast, the Democrats have none who can even come close to the vice president as a fundraiser. A Democratic dinner in Miami Beach, Fla., featuring former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie was a financial flop.

The only Democrat with real fund-raising credentials, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, has been off the circuit since the automobile crash on Cape Cod last July in which a female passenger was killed.

Five Agnew appearances, three last week and two this weekend, are expected to gross some $1.5 million, with 8,000 expected to pay $100 for a dinner at St. Paul, Minn., Auditorium tonight, and nearly 1,000 due to pay that amount in Atlanta Saturday.

Bombers Hit Supplies And Fuel Stores

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. B-52 bombers launched fresh raids today against the Ho Chi Minh trail in eastern Laos. Sources said the bombs touched off secondary explosions, indicating hits on ammunition and truck fuel stores.

The network of trails the enemy uses to move supplies to South Vietnam is far to the south of the Plain of Jars, which the North Vietnamese reportedly captured today.

The sources said U.S. fighter-bombers are flying combat support missions for the Laotian government forces near the plain.

Since the North Vietnamese began their offensive on the plain, enemy-initiated action in South Vietnam has been slight. Meanwhile action appeared to be picking up slightly in the A Shau Valley and Hue 400 miles northeast of Saigon. The Ho Chi Minh trail feeds into the valley's Eastern edge.

In the latest in a series of clashes in the region, North Vietnamese troops attacked an American paratrooper patrol and shot down an observation helicopter.

Two Americans were killed and eight wounded, including all three crewmen wounded aboard the helicopter. Enemy losses were not known.

The U.S. Command also reported that U.S. infantrymen clashed with North Vietnamese troops 70 miles northwest of Saigon near the Cambodian border. Two Americans were killed and 13 wounded in the hour-long fight. The command said enemy losses were unknown.

The helicopter crash raised to 17 the number of U.S. helicopters acknowledged lost in the past 11 days, with 39 Americans and four South Vietnamese killed and 39 Americans and 52 South Vietnamese wounded.

Since Jan. 1, 1961, official figures show that 6,432 American helicopters and fixed wing aircraft have been reported lost in Vietnam.

In another significant action, four American infantrymen were killed and 29 wounded in a five-hour battle 27 miles south-southeast of Da Nang. Enemy losses were not known.

Government sources said today the trial of two deputies accused of pro-Viet Cong activities will begin before a military tribunal Monday.

The deputies, whose parliamentary immunity was lifted early this month, are Tran Ngoc Chau and Huynh Van Tu. Both have denied the charges.
